

We need better media. Help make it happen this June 6–8.

Media are supposed to serve the public interest. But instead, corporate media have been serving their own interests, replacing hard-hitting journalism with fluff and spin, silencing diverse and independent voices, and even clamping down on Internet freedom.

It doesn't have to be this way. On June 6–8, thousands of activists, media makers, educators, journalists, artists, policymakers and concerned citizens will come together with speakers like Bill Moyers, Arianna Huffington, Dan Rather, Amy Goodman, Van Jones, Naomi Klein at the National Conference for Media Reform.

The NCMR is an event for anyone concerned about the state of our media and committed to working for change. This unforgettable weekend will feature rousing speakers, musical performances and enlightening films as well as dozens of interactive panels and hands-on workshops on media issues and activism. Join us at the Minneapolis Convention Center this June.

To register or learn more, call 1-877-888-1533 or visit

freepress.net/conference

the national conference for media reform

NCMR
2008

JUNE 6-8, 2008 ★ MINNEAPOLIS CONVENTION CENTER ★ PRESENTED BY FREE PRESS